The Second Term Exam of English

🕮 Part One: Reading: (15 pts) Read the text and do the activities

Teachers may feel underpaid and unappreciated. However, according to the results of a recent career survey, they are influencing and inspiring a very large category of people: teenagers. The survey found that teaching is a top career choice for teenagers, ranking as high as doctor - a frequent favourite job - and just above lawyer; which is another popular choice.

The survey was based on responses from more than 1,000 people who were aged from13 to 17. The question asked was, "What kind of work do you think you will do for a career?" The teenagers were asked to give their top three choices. In addition to the three jobs mentioned above, the other top ten teenagers' choices included sports, science, architecture, business, the military, engineering and nursing.

Results have always differed between girls and boys. For example, a military career has never been a top-ten choice among girls, but it is often popular with boys. On the other hand, nursing is usually a popular choice with girls, but has never made the top ten with boys.
